FOREWORD

Election 1988 was indeed a "win" for women—women candidates, women campaign professionals, and women voters. The attention focused on the woman voter and the "Gender Gap" she created was instrumental in bringing to the forefront of the campaign activity and rhetoric the issues for which women have been fighting for years. For the first time, we heard women's concerns being articulated and saw these concerns form the centerpiece of campaign strategy at all levels.

At the same time, women candidates were running—and winning—in greater numbers from municipalities to the national congress.

The biggest surprise was at the federal level, where women scored a major win in the U. S. House of Representatives at two levels.

First, all 23 incumbents retained their seats, proving that incumbency works for women as well, even when they face very tough challengers. The freshmen Congresswomen were able to survive these challenges as well as their more senior colleagues.

Secondly, we were able to break the logjam in our numbers in the House of Representatives which had remained constant for many years. November 1988 saw 2 women—New York's Nita Lowey and Washington's Jolene Unsoeld—join their 23 women colleagues in the House. A March 1989 special election in Indiana proved that women candidates can indeed score upset victories when Jill Long trounced her opponent in a third try for federal office.

We saw many firsts as well in women attaining statewide office. Madeleine Kunin was the first woman in political history to win reelection to a third term as governor of her state. For the first time, we have 12 women state treasurers, a woman commissioner of agriculture and several women elected to their state's Supreme Courts.

The state legislatures, where many of our successful women candidates for higher office begin their political careers, saw a significant number of women added to their rolls. Another 100 joined the political pipeline raising the percentage of women state legislators to 17%.

We will continue to see a positive shift in priorities on the national, state and local levels as more and more women run for and attain public office. Women have discovered the effectiveness of power and are more determined than ever to make use of that power to address the issues of concern to us all.

To those women who were willing to make the commitment to run for public office and to work toward the goals which unite us parity and democracy in government—we pay special tribute in this 1989 Directory of Women Elected Officials.

To Philip Morris we express our appreciation for making possible the publication and distribution of this Directory.

FOREWORD

One of the most heartening developments in recent American history has been the increasing participation of women in government, especially in elective office. Every year more women undertake the challenge of running for office and every year more are elected.

Simultaneously, those women who already occupy positions in government gain in experience and seniority, establishing the tradition that will consolidate current gains while facilitating the success of future candidates.

The ultimate results of this process are no less than revolutionary. They promise that eventually the largest class of inadequately represented people in our nation will achieve parity in terms of political power. Equally important, they offer an example to other under-represented elements in our population, showing that they too can attain the all-important goal of equality of representation.

The National Directory of Women Elected Officials is an emblem of American womanhood's hard-earned achievements in the fiercely competitive political arena. Offering profiles of national officials and access listings for officials at all levels, it also provides statistics that indicate how well women are represented in diverse governmental bodies. What the Directory signifies, therefore, is not just the victories of the past but those that remain to be won.

Philip Morris Companies, Inc. has sponsored the Directory since its first issue as part of a long tradition of encouraging and supporting groups engaged in the struggle for equality. Now, when women are steadily increasing their presence in the political arena, Philip Morris salutes the officials and individuals who continue to contribute to this noble effort.

DEDICATION

Two hundred years have passed since the election of George Washington and the seating of the first Congress. In this era of bicentennial celebration, we pay tribute to our Constitution, our forebears, our first president. It is fitting that this National Directory of Women Elected Officials, listing over 200 pages of women office holders, acknowledge the contributions of two women who set the course of our empowerment – the first women of the U.S. Senate and the House of Representatives.

In 1922, Rebecca Latimer Felton was appointed by Georgian Governor Thomas Hardwick to fill the U.S. Senate seat of Senator Thomas Watson, who had died suddenly. As a Member of Congress four years earlier, Hardwick had voted against suffrage and now in order to recapture the favor of the newly enfranchised women of his state, he reached out to this well-respected 87 year-old political activist and leader in the temperance and suffrage movements. After taking her oath of office she addressed the Chamber stating, "When the women of the country come in and sit with you, though there may be but a very few in the next few years, I pledge you that you will get ability, you will get integrity of purpose, you will get exalted patriotism . . . " Senator Felton held her seat for less than a month before the Senate adjourned, but the statement made by her presence on the floor of the Senate is etched into history.

Jeanette Pickering Rankin was elected in 1916 to the 65th Congress by the voters of Montana, four years before the 19th Amendment assured all American women the ballot. She had campaigned vigorously on a progressive Republican platform calling for federal suffrage, protective legislation for children, prohibition and 'preparedness that will make for peace.' As a Member of Congress, she made her greatest impact in promoting suffrage and led the successful floor debate on the 19th Amendment. A devout pacifist, Rankin voted against American involvement in both World Wars and epitomized a generation of female pacifists who believed in a global society of peace. On her 90th birthday, acknowledging personal tributes, this vigorous feminist and suffragist made clear that she had faith in her spiritual descendants, "You can go on from where I leave off."

Nancy Kassebaum was the first woman to be elected to the U.S. Senate without having been preceded in Congress by a spouse. Prior to her election in 1978, she served on the Maize School Board and was involved in a number of community organizations in Kansas. She was reelected to the Senate in 1984.

Senator Kassebaum serves on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee and the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs as well as the Special Committee on Aging.

She is the ranking member and former chairperson of the Foreign Relations Committee's Subcommittee on African Affairs. She is also the ranking member on the Labor and Human Resources' Subcommittee on Education, Arts and Humanities and a member of the Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Subcommittee on Securities.

Senator Kassebaum is the Honorary Chairperson of the Commission on the Future of Community Colleges. She also is a member of the Carnegie Council on Adolescent Development, a group that studies the problems faced by our nation's teenagers. In addition, she serves on the U.S.-Mexico Commission to study issues of concern to both nations.

A member of the Congressional Caucus for Women's Issues, Senator Kassebaum has supported efforts to reform the federal estate tax, review social security benefits, and promote economic equity for women. She is a proponent of the Equal Rights Amendment.

In 1987, Senator Kassebaum renewed her efforts to strengthen international family planning programs. She also introduced legislation that provides rights to pension benefits to spouses of Foreign Service personnel divorced prior to 1984. Commitees: Appropriations; Labor and Human Resources; Small Business

After ten years in the U.S. House of Representatives, Barbara Mikulski announced her candidacy for the United States Senate. Following a nationally-publicized campaign in which she was helped by a powerful cadre of volunteers, Senator Mikulski was elected with 61 percent of the vote in 1986.

Her win gave her title to a number of "firsts": she is the first Democratic woman to hold a Senate seat not previously held by her husband*; she is the first Democratic woman ever to have served in both Houses of Congress; and, she is the first woman to win a statewide election in Maryland.

The feisty Baltimore native became involved in politics in the late 1960's when Baltimore officials announced plans to build a 16-lane highway through the city's historic Fells Point neighborhood. Senator Mikulski soon became one of the key leaders and spokespersons protesting the highway's construction. At one major rally of supporters, she told those in attendance: "We didn't let the British take Fells Point, we didn't let termites take Fells Point, and we're not going to let the State Roads Commission take Fells Point." The anti-road forces were victorious, and Senator Mikulski soon launched a successful campaign for a seat on the Baltimore City Council.

After five years on the council, during which time she established a reputation as an effective, outspoken, hands-on representative of the people, she ran for the U.S. House of Representatives in 1976. Using her network of community volunteers, she won the Democratic primary and went on to defeat the Republican nominee in the general election.

Before running for public office, Senator Mikulski worked in Baltimore as a social worker for a local Catholic charities organization and later for the Baltimore City Welfare Department. It was while working with these organizations on cases of child abuse and child neglect that she developed her deep concern for the rights of children and families.

In the U.S. Congress, she distinguished herself on several committees, including the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, where she worked on legislation affecting the Port of Baltimore—one of the state's largest employers. She also became the first woman ever appointed to the powerful Energy and Commerce Committee—a position that allowed her to work for her constituents on a host of "bread and butter" issues, including railroads, telecommunications, and health care. Currently, Senator Mikulski serves on the Appropriations Committee and chairs its Subcommittee on HUD—Independent Agencies. She also serves on the Labor and Human Resources Committee and the Small Business Committee.

An active and vocal supporter of women's rights, Senator Mikulski was the principal sponsor of the Domestic Violence and Services Act, which was passed by the House in 1979, and of a bill granting direct Medicaid reimbursement to nurse-midwives, which was passed in 1980. Senator Mikulski was the primary sponsor of the Child Care Information and Referral Act, which was passed by the House. An ardent proponent of the Equal Rights Amendment, Senator Mikulski was a leader in the successful effort to extend the ratification time limit.

*Rebecca Fenton, Georgian Democrat, held an appointed Senate seat in the 67th Congress for less than a month, but did not have an opportunity to serve.

A leader on "quality of life" issues such as human rights and the environment, Representative Barbara Boxer has also become known as a "Pentagon watchdog." She has gained this title through her efforts to uncover wasteful spending and mismanagement in government. Her revelations of $7,600 coffee pots and $400 hammers spotlighted procurement abuses and led her to sponsor legislation requiring competitive bidding for the Defense Department's spare parts procurement program.

First elected in 1982, Representative Boxer has since won reelection by overwhelming margins. She is consistently given high marks by the League of Conservation Voters for her voting record on the environment—an issue of great concern to her constituents in the San Francisco area. She also has taken the lead in responding to the AIDS epidemic. As Chair of the Budget Committee's Task Force on AIDS from 1985-1988, Representative Boxer served as a strong advocate for increased federal funding for AIDS, as well as for improved AIDS education. Her legislation requiring AIDS counselors to be present at HIV drug treatment clinics was included in the omnibus drug bill passed by Congress in 1988.

In the 101st Congress, Congresswoman Boxer serves as Chair of the Human Resources Task Force of the Budget Committee. In this position she will work for effective health care, including greater funding for AIDS research. She is also co-chair, with Senator William Roth (R-DE), of the bipartisan Military Reform Caucus which works to eliminate waste and fraud in the Defense Department. As a member of the Government Operations Committee, Representative Boxer serves on its Subcommittees on Legislation and National Security, and on Government Activities and Transportation. In addition, she is a member of the Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families.

Her legislative agenda for the 101st Congress includes a bill to establish a U.S.-Soviet Peace Corps and two bills regarding election reform. The first election bill requires Presidential candidates to hold at least three general election debates in order to receive campaign funds from the presidential campaign check-off fund. The second bill calls for uniform poll closing so that Western voters no longer feel disenfranchised.

A member of the Executive Committee of the Congressional Caucus for Women's Issues, Representative Boxer is an original co-sponsor of the Economic Equity Act and a proponent of the Equal Rights Amendment. She is a board member of Planned Parenthood and she supports a woman's right to choose an abortion.

Representative Boxer has two children.

Patricia Scott Schroder, Democrat, represents the First Congressional District of Colorado, comprising most of the city and county of Denver. Representative Schroeder was elected in 1972 and reelected eight times, winning by 70 percent in 1988.

Congresswoman Schroeder's strong stands opposing pork barrel and wasteful defense spending have earned her a reputation as a "fiscally conservative liberal." She has been in the forefront of the progressive movement in the Democratic Party, taking leadership on critical issues of foreign and military policy, arms control and disarmament, women's economic equity, educational opportunity, and civil and constitutional rights.

Congresswoman Schroeder is the Dean of the Colorado Congressional Delegation, as well as the most senior woman in Congress. She has served in the House leadership as a Democratic Whip since 1978.

In February, 1988, Schroeder embarked on the Great American Family Tour with Harvard pediatrician Dr. T. Berry Brazelton, FAMILY TIES producer Gary David Goldberg, and the Director of the Study of Women and Men, Dr. Diana Meehan, in an effort to put family issues front and center on the national political agenda. For more than 15 years, she has served as a highly influential Washington voice for the people of the Seventh Congressional District of Illinois, as well as for women and Blacks. She serves on the House Energy and Commerce Committee and is known as an independent and articulate voice in the U.S. Congress.

An ardent supporter of the Equal Rights Amendment, Representative Collins also supports a woman's right to decide whether to have an abortion. High on her legislative agenda is enactment of a comprehensive federal child care program through the Child and Family Development Act. This bill would direct the Secretary of Health and Human Services to evaluate the nation's child care needs. It also would provide additional federal funds to increase the number of safe, affordable child care facilities, and help states upgrade their licensing and monitoring of child care facilities.

Congresswoman Collins also is committed to moving teen health off the critical list. She has introduced a bill that would authorize grants to create and support high school health clinics across the country. The clinics would provide nutrition and hygiene counseling, drug abuse education and treatment, and family-planning information and services.

An outspoken champion of minority rights, Congresswoman Collins has directed her efforts toward ensuring equal access for Blacks in the communications arena. She chaired a congressional subcommittee hearing which examined problems Black broadcasters face in securing advertising revenues and reviewed the Federal Communication Commission's rules for minority preferences for Blacks seeking broadcasting licenses.

From her seat on the Energy and Commerce Committee, Representative Collins also focuses on the critically important issues of Medicaid, infant mortality, health insurance and alcohol and drug abuse. As a newly appointed member of the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigation, she is responsible for reviewing and overseeing the operation of select government agencies.

As a member of the Government Operations Committee and chair of its Subcommittee on Government Activities and Transportation, which oversees the Department of Transportation and the operation of a number of other important federal agencies, she has been instrumental in initiating changes in the General Services Administration. Since her election to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1980, when she won the seat left vacant by Presidential contender John B. Anderson, Representative Lynn Martin has consistently been named as a political star on the rise. Most recently, the National Journal voted the Congresswoman from northwestern Illinois, "One of the most influential Members of Congress." Further, she was the only woman to serve as Co-Chair of the George Bush for President campaign.

This veteran House member completed three terms on the Budget Committee and two terms on the House Armed Services Committee. In the 101st Congress, Congresswoman Martin is serving her first term on the House Rules Committee, an arm of the House leadership and one of the most powerful committees on Capitol Hill. She also co-chairs the Bipartisan Ethics Task Force set up to review standards of official conduct for House members. In the 100th Congress, she chaired a Congressional Task Force on Women's Issues and led a successful bipartisan battle to extend to Congressional employees the same civil rights coverage provided most other American workers.

Her GOP colleagues elected Representative Martin as vice-chair of the House Republican Conference for the 98th Congress in 1984 and re-elected her to the post for the 99th and 100th Congresses, making her one of the top-ranking Republicans in the House. Her elevation to the position within the conference made her the first Republican woman ever elected to a leadership position in the U.S. House of Representatives. She is also the first woman to represent Illinois' Sixteenth Congressional District and is the highest ranking Republican woman in the state of Illinois.

Some of Representative Martin's specific legislative accomplishments include passage of a bill to strengthen the criminal justice system; efforts to bring Congress under equal opportunity and civil rights laws; and consensus building in the House on national spending priorities. She is a co-sponsor of the Equal Rights Amendment and a supporter of a woman's right to choose an abortion.

She first joined the ranks of elected officials in 1972 when she was elected to Winnebago County Board. She served on the board until 1976 when she was elected State Representative for the 34th District. In 1978, she was elected State Senator for the 34th Legislative District and served in that capacity until her election to the U.S. House of Representatives. Prior to Congresswoman Martin's election to the Winnebago County Board, she taught English, government and economics.

Elected to the House in 1984, Congresswoman Jan Meyers was considered a premier candidate—one with plenty of experience in state and local government and a set of issue positions attractive to both parties. After winning a tough primary battle in which she ran in a field of five Republicans, she went on to defeat a well-known Democrat in the general election, garnering 55 percent of the vote and the respect of the political community. She ran unopposed in 1986, and in 1988 captured 74 percent of the vote.

A strong advocate of women's rights, Congresswoman Meyers has won recognition for her efforts to promote women's equality in the areas of small business, education, and human services delivery. As a State Senator, she authored a bill providing that the sexual history of a rape victim could not be used in a trial unless the judge had heard evidence in his chambers and ruled it relevant. She also worked successfully to strengthen drunk-driving laws and wrote a bill outlining state procedures for investigating and following up on the abuse of the elderly in their homes.

One of her main priorities in the 101st Congress is gaining control of government spending in a fair and judicious manner. While she supports a balanced budget amendment and a strong defense, she is also concerned with the feminization of poverty and women's economic equity. A strong supporter of the Equal Rights Amendment, Congresswoman Meyers supports a woman's right to choose an abortion.

Representative Meyers serves on the Foreign Affairs Committee, where she sits on the Subcommittee on Europe and the Middle East and the Subcommittee on Human Rights and International Organizations. She is also a member of the Small Business Committee and the Select Committee on Aging, and is a member of its task force on Women and Social Security. Representative Meyers is a member of the Congressional Caucus for Women's Issues and the Human Rights Caucus, among others. For example, Representative Roukema co-founded the Ridgewood Senior Citizen Housing Corporation and helped launch the Bergen Pines Alcohol Treatment Center for Women.

In 1978, Marge Roukema moved into a new level of public service. She launched a campaign and earned the Republican nomination for Congress. While she was not successful in her initial bid for national office, her campaign style and organizational skills impressed observers. In 1980, she tried again, this time defeating a three-term incumbent Democrat Congressman. Congresswoman Roukema has been re-elected in every subsequent election by increasing margins—winning with 78 percent in 1988.

One of three women freshman legislators elected to serve in the 101st Congress, Representative Lowey defeated a two term Representative in her first bid for elective office. She is the only woman to defeat a sitting incumbent.

Already involved in community activities, Congresswoman Lowey was tapped by friend and neighbor, Mario Cuomo, in 1975 to join him in the New York Secretary of State's Office. She served in the department's Anti-Poverty Division until 1978 when she was appointed Deputy Director of the department's Economic Opportunity Division. In that capacity she managed an economic development program which created partnerships between the public and private sector. She also specialized in neighborhood preservation and low income weatherization. When Cuomo became governor, newly appointed Secretary of State Gail Shaffer named Ms. Lowey Assistant Secretary of State in 1985, a position in which she served until 1987 when she began her campaign for Congress.

Congresswoman Lowey, a member of the Westchester Jewish Community Services, National Women's Political Caucus of Westchester, League of Women Voters and many other organizations, mobilized her extensive social and professional contacts to form a solid grassroots political base. The people she had worked with for a great many years were able to help Representative Lowey raise the $1.2 million needed to remain competitive with her opponent. In addition to her fundraising efforts, Congresswoman Lowey conducted a "one-on-one" grassroots campaign in which she and members of her family thoroughly canvassed the district. Additionally, she targeted the Republican and Independent voters in her district who indicated their preference on the choice issue.

During her campaign, Congresswoman Lowey called for an increased federal role in education, child care, and environmental protection. Specifically, she wanted an immediate clean up of the Long Island Sound, strict enforcement of the Clean Air Act and improvement of the Superfund Program. She was one of only five challengers in the nation to defeat an incumbent in 1986, and the only woman to do so.

Congresswoman Slaughter has an extensive background in public service and community advocacy. In 1975, she ran for the Monroe County (New York) Legislature and defeated a multi-term incumbent; she easily won reelection in 1977. While a member of the County Legislature from 1976 to 1979, she also served as the regional coordinator for the Department of State under then Secretary of State Mario Cuomo. In 1978, she managed Cuomo's upstate campaign for Lieutenant Governor and then went on to coordinate the new Lieutenant Governor's upstate regional office.

In 1982, Representative Slaughter ran for the New York State Assembly, upsetting a five-term incumbent, and was reelected in 1984 with 55 percent of the vote. As a member of the State Assembly, she was co-prime sponsor of the law that exempted Social Security benefits from New York State income tax, and she supported the allocation of funds to assist low-income senior citizens in finding housing and obtaining prescription drugs. She also worked to improve benefits for veterans.

During her first term in Congress, Represenative Slaughter aided passage of a bill that extended the Older Americans Act to include funding for a health prevention program and expansion of food benefits for the elderly. However, she will retain her seniority on this Committee where she chairs the Subcommittee on Housing and Memorial Affairs. Congresswoman Kaptur also is a member of another Subcommittee on Housing and Community Development, which means she serves on both Congressional committees with jurisdiction over the nation's middle-class "home ownership programs."

In other Congressional activities, Congresswoman Kaptur recently was reappointed to the Democratic Steering and Policy Committee by the Speaker of the House. She is one of the four junior Members — as well as the only woman — to serve on this 31-Member body. The Steering and Policy Committee recommends Members' Committee assignments and Committee Chairs. It also plays a pivotal role in shaping and directing the legislative priorities for the House of Representatives. She also chairs a new House Task Force on "Financing Health Insurance," which is charged with finding solutions to the health care dilemma.

As a result of her work on behalf of the nation's senior citizens, Representative Kaptur was the only new Member of Congress in 1984 to receive the National Council of Senior Citizens' Award of Merit for "her outstanding record of contribution to improving the quality of life of older Americans." A strong advocate of women's rights and a co-sponsor of the Equal Rights Amendment, Congresswoman Kaptur serves as Treasurer of the bi-partisan Congressional Caucus on Women's Issues. She also serves on the Executive Board of the bi-partisan Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition which addresses regional issues such as Great Lakes shipping, utility costs, and environment.

Congresswoman Claudine Schneider is the first woman ever to hold a major political office in Rhode Island. During her first year in Congress, she was hailed by The Wall Street Journal as "one of the five 'winners' in the Congressional Class of 1980." Returned to her seat in 1982 and subsequent elections with overwhelming majorities, she is the first Republican since 1938 to represent the Second Congressional District.

Prior to her election, Congresswoman Schneider was founder of the Rhode Island Committee on Energy and served as the executive director of the Conservation Law Foundation. A former federal coordinator of the Rhode Island Coastal Zone Management Program, Congresswoman Schneider also has served as Rhode Island's citizen representative to the Energy Development Administration.

Now in her fifth term in the U.S. House of Representatives, Congresswoman Schneider has used her tremendous energy and coalition-building skills to establish a strong record of achievement on such issues as rebuilding American competitiveness, battling government waste and abuse, improving U.S./Soviet relations, protecting the environment and preserving civil and economic rights for women and minorities.

She is the ranking Republican on the Natural Resources, Agricultural Research and the Environment Subcommittee of the Science, Space and Technology Committee, the ranking Republican on the Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, and a member of the Select Committee on Aging.

She is an outspoken advocate of women's rights, having represented the United Nations' Environmental Program at the Women's International Decade Conference in July, 1985. She also introduced the Student Financial Aid Equity Act to improve women's access to federal financial-aid dollars. Key provisions of her bill were included in the Higher Education Reauthorization Act, which was passed by the House in December 1985.

A supporter of the Equal Rights Amendment, Representative Schneider has joined several of her female Republican colleagues in lobbying the White House for legislative initiatives targeted to women, including child care, pension reform and homemaker investments. One of her priorities for the 101st Congress is passage of the Family and Medical Leave Act. The FMLA is a minimum labor standard which guarantees unpaid job secured leave for workers who need time off to care for dependent children and parents.

A leader of the "Gypsy Moths," a group of moderate Republicans from the Northeast and Midwest, Congresswoman Schneider has worked to protect funding in human services and to ensure regional equity in federal spending. She is Republican co-chair of the Congressional Competitiveness Caucus and a member of the GOP Task Force on Trade and Competitiveness. She served on the Business/Higher Education Forum, a group of CEOs from Fortune 500 companies and presidents of major universities. She is also co-chair of the U.S. Steering Committee on "Congressbridge," a series of televised discussions between members of Congress and Deputies of the Supreme Soviet via a two-way satellite link.

Representative Liz Patterson has been victorious in two strong challenges by Republican opponents. Her win in 1988 came in spite of a District-wide landslide victory for George Bush.

Congresswoman Patterson's main concern in her first term was the excessive federal budget deficit. During the 100th Congress, her voting record for deficit reduction went well beyond that of the average Member. This continues to be an issue of concern.

Some of the Congresswoman's other accomplishments in the 100th Congress include the sponsorship of legislation to create child care centers in Veterans' Administration (VA) medical centers. VA medical centers have been having difficulty retaining and attracting qualified medical personnel as they compete with private and state medical facilities. This legislation was included as a provision in the Omnibus Veterans' Health Bill which was signed by President Reagan.

Congresswoman Patterson also worked with her colleagues on the Textile Caucus to pass the textile bill in the House twice in the 100th Congress. Although the Caucus was unsuccessful in overriding the President's veto, it was deemed a major accomplishment to get the bill to his desk.

Her priorities for the 101st Congress include continued work to restrain federal spending, while tapping innovative sources of funding for federal programs. She also intends to continue to work to see textile legislation signed into law.

Representative Patterson is a member of the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee, the Veterans' Affairs Committee, and the Select Committee on Hunger. She is also a member of the Textile Caucus, the Arts Caucus, and the Congressional Caucus on Women's Issues, and others.

Prior to her election to the House, Congresswoman Patterson served in the South Carolina State Senate for seven years, where she worked to tighten the state's criminal codes and broaden child-protection laws. She served on the Education, Finance, Medical Affairs, and Rules Committees and was chair of the Governor's Task Force on Hunger and Nutrition and the Task Force on Prescription Drug Abuse. She also served on the Spartanburg County Council in 1975 and 1976.

Representative Patterson is the mother of three children and the daughter of the late Olin D. Johnston, former U.S. Senator and Governor of South Carolina.

In the Third District, she is actively involved in economic development and recruitment. The 99th Congress saw the finalization of several key projects, including major expansions for national companies. She continues to actively pursue opportunities that will provide more jobs in the Third District.

The Congresswoman has always made national energy independence a high priority with consistent emphasis on a balanced energy program. Through her Subcommittee work, the Congresswoman has stressed the development of a variety of technologies from solar energy and conservation to breeder reactors and fusion energy. She is an author of the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982 and the Coal Technology and Utilization Act of 1984.

Unanimously elected chairman of the Tennessee Valley Congressional Caucus at the opening of the 100th Congress, Congresswoman Lloyd chaired the Caucus for the entire Congress. During that time, she was instrumental in bringing focus to the Tennessee Valley Authority's problems and saw many of them resolved with the agency well on the road to recovery at the end of the 100th Congress.

A pro-family legislator, the Congresswoman supported and spoke on behalf of several child protectionist measures, including prevention of drug abuse and teenage suicide. A strong protector of Social Security benefits, she has sponsored legislation which covers several areas of elderly abuse.

Prior to her election to Congress, Representative Lloyd was a successful small businesswoman as the owner-operator of a local radio station, WTTI. The Representative received her education at Shorter College. Congresswoman Lloyd is an active member of the Church of Christ, has four children, and resides in Chattanooga.

Representative Jolene Unsoeld, a freshman Democrat from Washington State, got her start in politics as a citizen lobbyist at the State Capitol in Olympia. Championing several good government and environmental causes, she quickly became known for her tenacity and determination.

Unsoeld was instrumental in the passage of the state's landmark Public Disclosure Law which greatly expanded citizen access to public records. She also authored two editions of Who Gave? Who Got? How Much?, summarizing what major interest groups gave to those serving in the 44th and 45th sessions of the Washingon State Legislature.

During the first of two terms in the Washington Legislature, she was the architect of a state-wide water quality financing program based on pay-as-you-go scheme. In her second term, Representative Unsoeld played a major role in the passage of the state's toxic waste cleanup and prevention law.

After arriving in Congress, Representative Unsoeld was named to serve on the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, and the House Education and Labor Committee. The Merchant Marine Committee has jurisdiction over numerous issues of vital interest to the people of her Southwest Washington District including federal salmon hatchery programs, marine sanctuaries, and offshore oil and gas exploration. On the Education and Labor Committee, Congresswoman Unsoeld plans to pursue her "National Family Agenda" which includes family leave, childcare, early childhood education and minimum wage legislation.

Raised in western Washington and Oregon, Congresswoman Unsoeld was the first woman to climb the direct North Face of the Grand Teton. She is the mother of four children.
